MORGAN LEWIS CONTINUES TO EXPAND LABOR AND EMPLOYMENT LAW PRACTICE IN PRINCETON OFFICE

Partner Richard G. Rosenblatt Relocates to Princeton

Philadelphia, May 3, 2002 - Morgan Lewis, one of the 10 largest U.S. law firms, has announced that Labor and Employment Law partner Richard G. Rosenblatt has moved to the Princeton office to better provide high-level employment litigation and counseling experience to the firm's New Jersey practice. Rosenblatt has extensive experience in New Jersey state and federal courts in a variety of employment matters. With the addition of Rosenblatt, the Princeton office now has six experienced labor and employment lawyers onsite, with over 70 other labor and employment lawyers in New York and Philadelphia available to meet the growing demand for services from clients with employees in New Jersey. The Labor and Employment Practice of Morgan Lewis consists of over 160 attorneys nationwide, servicing clients in a variety of industries.

Rosenblatt joined Morgan Lewis in 1990, and for 12 years has represented New Jersey and Pennsylvania employers in a variety of complex labor and employment matters. He has extensive experience litigating matters involving the various employment discrimination and whistleblower statutes and the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, as well as disputes involving employee rights, such as breach of contract claims, wrongful discharge, restrictive covenants and misappropriation of trade secrets. He also handles disputes involving labor management relations, such as mass picketing injunctions, unfair labor practices and union avoidance.

"Rich's move full time to Princeton enhances our ability to service our growing base of clients with employees in New Jersey," said Robert A. White, Princeton office managing partner. "The addition of Rich, combined with the recent additions of former federal district court judge Jim Lechner and environmental partner Gary Gengel, provide our Princeton office with the resources to service the labor and employment, litigation and business and finance needs of New Jersey companies."

Rosenblatt earned his law degree, cum laude, from Cornell Law School in 1990. He is Chairman of the Southern New Jersey Chamber of Commerce Human Resources Council and is a member of the Chamber's State Affairs Committee. Rosenblatt is also the Chairman of the South Jersey Chapter of the Stanley Reitman Labor and Employment Law Inn of Court and formerly participated as a member of the Township of Cherry Hill, NJ Human Relations Council.
